About Brown Turkey Figs

The Brown Turkey Fig tree is a moderately growing fruit tree. The fruit has a reddish brown skin and a sweet red flesh. Brown Turkey does not need pollination. Restricting the roots of any fig tree helps encourage a larger display of fruit. The breba crop (first) is usually small but the main crop can be quite large if planted in the right conditions.

Interesting Facts

Evidence shows that fig cultivation dates back to at least 5000 BC.

Figs were held sacred by the Roman Empire. In Roman mythology the wolf that nurtured Romulus and Remus rested under a fig tree.
